

Women’s Preventive Medications List, 2018

The following Preventative medications and products may be available to you with no cost-sharing (copay, coinsurance and/or deductible) depending on your plan. Preventive medications are used for the management and prevention of complications from conditions such as high blood pressure, high cholesterol, diabetes, asthma, osteoporosis, heart attack and stroke. Below is a list of preventive medications and the conditions they are used to treat. Additionally the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act (PPACA) requires that certain categories of drugs and other products be included in preventive care services. For preventive medications (including over-the-counter medications) or products to be covered, you’ll need to get a prescription from your doctor. Please note: The proprietary name (Brand Name) is given as reference information only. If there is a generic form of the preventive medication available, only the generic will be considered for coverage at zero copay.
